This is the beauty of Orchestration in that it requires absolutely no commitments regarding transport or other plumbing, leaving these largely as mere deployment details. Figure 17 provides a snapshot of the Orchestration after adding the logical Receive Port. Figure 2: The proposed Northwind Traders Order & Fulfillment process. Create the Orchestration As part of the design phase of the solution, you created a business process diagram (Figure 8) of what the SendPO workflow might look like using the ODBA. There is a lack of visibility as to where an order is within each step of the process. Many times orders are shipped late because the fulfillment and shipping team is overwhelmed with packages that need to be prepared and staged for shipment. To provide a comprehensive overview of how Orchestration interacts with other pseudo-protocols on the Send side, the solution will implement the Acme.Billing.BillingService service as a SOAP Web service using the BizTalk SOAP Adapter. The tool is intended for facilitating collaboration between developer, analyst, and stakeholder in designing Orchestrations around business processes. In addition, BTS 2006 provides an optional Microsoft Visio add in, known as the Orchestration Designer for Business Analysts (ODBA). Figure 26 shows the expected response from the RetailOpsService. One is to deploy an endpoint that is bound explicitly to the Orchestration. A Long Running Scope can consist of other nested Long Running or Atomic Scopes, but an Atomic Scope cannot contain any child transactions (although nesting Scopes with Transaction Type set to None is acceptable). Assume that another team is building the new Web site, so the deliverable that this article will address is an entry point, or a gateway to the middle-tier components and services. Some existing relationships go so far back that some customers still place their orders in person. This step is the equivalent of creating a traditional variable declaration, except that BizTalk distinguished variables from messages (due to the fact that each is handled a bit differently). Finally, you applied some design techniques allowing you to address the problem domain in a loosely coupled manner that can be extended to support new workflows, components, and services as the needs of the organization change and grow. BizTalk Explorer does not lend itself well to distributed deployments; however, for developing locally it is the perfect tool to deploy and test a solution and will help to isolate some of the complexity inherent to using the fully featured BizTalk Server Administration Console. The Orchestration should now resemble Figure 18. I wrapped up Part 1 with an overview of the Visual Studio 2005 Project System, which consists of tools that enable you to work with BizTalk Server 2006. Figure 5: The Orchestration Designer for Business Analyst template is an add-in to Microsoft Visio. As a result, you must define it as a Message at the global

Scope within the Orchestration. This is the Northwind Trader's business process at its core, and as such represents a blueprint-representative of the desires and expectations of it's stakeholders-for addressing a technical solution. You will notice that under the ReceivePurchaseOrderPortType, BizTalk created an Operation called Operation_1. Sequence diagrams and object models provide a useful system and API aspect to the design, which is useful mostly to architects, developers, program managers, and analysts. The only exception is the Bill Customer activity which will be fulfilled by our fictitious payment processing vendor via the Acme.Billing.BillingService SOAP endpoint. As with any program, you need a variable to store the response so that you can use it as needed: Again, within the Retail Activities Scope, under Orchestration View, create a new variable, this time of type Boolean and provide a name, such as generalLedgerSuccess. To this end, once the online store front is complete, the IT team will start using it as their new interface for entering new purchase orders so that data entry and processing is consistent. Click the Retail Activities Scope and note the properties. To add the components and services to the BizTalk Project, right-click the References folder within the Northwind.BusinessWorkflows.Workflow project and add a reference to each relevant project, assembly or service endpoint just as you would for a class library or other Visual Studio 2005 project type. Delivery At this point, the Retail Operations application is ready to be turned over for integration with the new online store front! Leveraging the Retail Operations
